

THE EVENING STAR.

WASHINGTON.

THURSDAY, April 15, 1897.
CROSSBY S. NOTES, Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent family circulation much more than the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

It is in order to avoid delays, on account of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editor, or to the Business Department, according to tenor or purpose.

An Appeal to Hon. A. M. Clapp and Seven Others.

It is stated in the "Post" this morning that the "Hon. A. M. Clapp, Col. W. L. Bramhall, Col. L. Cook, W. B. Kelly, R. F. Cawshaw, R. M. Elliot, Dr. R. H. Graham and Prof. Alexander Christie" of the executive committee of the United Republican Club met last night and "freely discussed" the nomination of Mr. John B. Wright to be Commissioner in an unfavorable way. This is a deplorable condition of affairs. Here are 300,000 people of the District, deducting the Hon. A. M. Clapp, Col. W. L. Bramhall, Col. L. Cook, W. B. Kelly, R. F. Cawshaw, R. M. Elliot, Dr. R. H. Graham and Prof. Alexander Christie, heartily applauding the nomination of Mr. Wright to be Commissioner, and expecting his prompt confirmation as a matter of course. But this cannot be. Mr. Clapp and seven others block the way. They say that notwithstanding Mr. Wright would make an honest, capable and unexceptionable Commissioner they cannot permit his confirmation because he can prove himself a stalwart republican and can answer satisfactorily a string of questions headed by the absurd inquiry to a voteless citizen, "Have you ever voted the republican ticket?"

This, we repeat, is a distressing situation, and threatens, unless Mr. Clapp and his seven associates relent, to become intolerable.

Will not they consent to let up, on their clench on the other 299,992 people of the District, and allow the wheels of the District government to revolve again?

Obstruction in the Senate.

Mr. Gorman in the Senate calls for a thorough examination of the appropriation bills now before that body, and for a substantial reduction of the sums total. His observations are based upon the assertion that the situation has changed very materially since the bills were prepared, that they have not been considered by a committee "completely and fully organized," and that in the present state of affairs in the country the amounts they carry are extravagant.

How materially has the situation changed since these bills were prepared? The work was done only a few months ago. The estimates of that day still stand. The bills would have been law weeks ago but for Mr. Cleveland's refusal to sign them.

If the committee of the Senate are not, as Mr. Gorman complains, "completely and fully organized," whose fault is it? The republican party is expected to act? The republican party in the Senate have shown a disposition to shoulder their part of the responsibility. They have not been permitted to do so, and Mr. Gorman is the author of the terms which the republicans have declared themselves unable to accept. But the appropriations committee would scarcely be changed at all even if Mr. Gorman's terms were to be accepted. It would remain substantially as now organized.

"The condition of the country," so far as appropriations are concerned, is the result of a lack of revenue. And the responsibility for that lack of revenue lies at the door of the present tariff law, which, as a revenue producer, is a demonstrated failure. Who is responsible for the present tariff law? Was any other senator's voice so potent in the deliberations which gave shape to it as Mr. Gorman's? His prominence in the contest gave to the measure a hyphenated name. It is known as the Gorman-Wilson bill. The present Dingley bill is designed to correct the evil as to revenue, and provide the government with money enough to carry on comprehensive and necessary functions.

The Senate is a deliberative body, which may always be relied upon to carefully examine all questions laid before it. Economy is a good watchword. The country, however, it is safe to say, is more interested just now in a prompt discharge of the business before Congress than in the fashioning of a campaign cry designed to further the interests of Mr. Gorman in the coming senatorial fight in Maryland.

Good Detective Work.

The local police deserve credit for their good work in discovering the men who robbed a Texan in the White Lot the other night. The clue on which they worked was of the slightest character, a meager description of one of the men being furnished by the faded victim, whose memory was fogged by the blows of the other highwaymen and it is probable that in due time they will meet their punishment for their crime. This sort of business in the heart of the city must be ended and it can only be done by the rigid enforcement of the law upon the criminal. Such good work by the police will go far towards breaking up the gangs of robbers and foot-pads who at times make the city market dangerous to pedestrians. One of the men apprehended is notorious for his crooked work and the police experience with him is such as to warrant sharp treatment by the courts.

The world may not be growing better, but it is certainly more peaceful in its disposition. Scarcely a fortnight passes which does not witness reform and toleration of language and insinuations which would inevitably have provoked combat in days when men were in general more sensitive and less business-like.

The prominent Americans who are going to the queen's jubilee deserve credit perhaps for good reform. In not resenting the fact that London did not turn out to see the President inaugurated.

Under Which King?

A difference is to be noted between the address put forward Monday by the National Association of Democratic Clubs and the address delivered by Mr. Bryan Tuesday night. They do not emphasize the same point.

The address of the clubs is pitched distinctly—almost shrilly, one might say—in the key of tariff reform. The Dingley bill is the text, and it is roundly arraigned. The criticism, indeed, reads like a chapter from the campaign of 1892, when the tariff was practically the only issue. The whole democratic record on the subject is related, and the law laid down afresh that tariff reform must be effected upon democratic lines. There are absolutely no reservations—no ifs or buts.

The records of the new battleship Iowa and the American liners St. Louis and St. Paul show that American shipbuilders are the best in the world, and yet our merchant marine is too small to be recognized. Shall it continue so, is now the leading question.

Compensations.

It is said that cycling has caused a marked falling off in the sale of tail coats, stiff shirts, collars, etc. But think what a demand it has created for bloomers, leggings, sticking plaster and chewing gum!

thing in its own order. For the present, tariff reform can wait. Says Mr. Bryan:

"The money question must be the paramount issue of the next campaign, as it was of the last. If the Dingley bill brings general and permanent prosperity, the democratic party will not be in a position to win a contest by opposing it. If, on the other hand, the Dingley bill proves a disappointment to those who advocate it, our position of 1890 will be strengthened, and public attention will be riveted upon the fact that the cause of financial depression is to be found in our monetary system. In giving importance to this great issue, the party does not mean to assert that bimetalism is a panacea for all political and social ills, but we mean that the party will not seriously undertake any other reform until the money of the Constitution is restored."

This is what the poet calls "hot stuff." There is no getting around it or away from it. It comes, too, at a time when it is sure to attract unusual attention. The national democrats are preparing to dine. They are going to discuss politics over smoking vials, and in a spirit of preparation for the future. They are bitterly opposed to the Dingley bill, and some hope have been entertained among them that maybe the old tariff cry—a resounding blast on the old horn—might reunite the party. But is this possible now? Will these gentlemen be justified in changing their present position in the chest of Mr. Bryan's declaration, that no other reform is to be seriously undertaken until the money question is disposed of?

The national democrats will be heard from in New York city on the evening of the 24th instant, and Mr. Bryan's speech will add to the interest of what they shall have to say on that occasion.

It may be that the alleged shipwreck is only a hoax to frighten the tariff constructors with the hint that after they get the duties all duly scheduled commerce will be conducted by routes which will make it impossible to collect them.

Great Britain's traditional spirit of fair play is not shown in the tendency of some of her newspapers to encourage the slaughter of female seals in such a manner as to cause the indiscriminate and profitless killing of their young.

Japan can surely appreciate the undesirability of having the hostility of China on one side of the Pacific ocean and that of the United States on the other.

Mr. Bailey continues loyal in spite of the fact that there is no evidence that Thomas Jefferson ever pinned his faith to the Prince Albert coat.

Mr. Fitzsimmons proposes, if there is any practical method of so doing, to hang on to the laurel wreath and let the gloves alone.

General Weyer is the only institution that can rival a base-ball club for sustained enthusiasm in issuing prospectuses.

With all their ornateness, the Greek uniforms do not show any superfluity of red tape.

Only one hundred and eighty men worked today on the city post office building.

SHOOTING STARS.

A Comparison.

The very laconic man had come to a pause in his discourse, and an admirer took advantage of the lull to say: "Hasn't he a splendid command of language?"

"It doesn't seem so to me," replied the weary-looking lady. "He has plenty of it. It's like riding a bicycle down hill. He can start easily enough, but he can't stop himself."

Political Reciprocity.

To serve my country of 1 year, And I am very free To say I think that, in return, My country should serve me.

Unappreciative.

"Might I ask what school of poetry you prefer?" inquired the young man who writes.

"The homeopathic school. The smaller the dose, the better it suits me."

An Unconquerable Prejudice.

"Dis is a fine piece," remarked Plooding Pete, who had been regaling himself with some literature which he had picked up on the way.

"What's it about?" asked Meandering Mike.

"'About de beauties of nature. Come to 'ink of it, some o' dem is fine. Don't ye kind of enjoy lookin' over at evening, and seein' de moonlight and de stars in light?"

"No," replied Meandering Mike. "Me nature's too sympathetic. I feel sorry for 'em."

General Indignation.

"It seems to me that you can be depended on to say the wrong thing more than any other man in this town."

"Insulted the Bilgins family."

"Why, I tried to compliment them."

"You said that their baby, who is still too young to have any hair, looked exactly like his father."

"Yes."

"Well, Bilgins is insulted on his own account and his wife is insulted on behalf of the baby."

A Jeffersonian.

Only two men really knew What this country ought to do; Reached the very bottom facts As to Congress and its acts; Where's the mind that rightly gleams Where the Constitution means?

Yet by us the thing was done— Me and Thomas Jefferson.

I am willing to agree Most men want their country free; Here's the question in each mind— "How much freedom and what kind?"

'Tis a matter of such doubt; Only two have found it out; Only two the key have won; Me and Thomas Jefferson.

Many people vow I'm wrong; To be doubted by the throng Is the price that genius pays For the world's maturer praise.

I am told they'd disagree With him as they do with me. 'Tis the humane old Yankee we've run— Me and Thomas Jefferson.

The Railroads and the Trust Decision.

From the Chicago Tribune.

If the roads will be satisfied to accept reasonable rates—the question of reasonableness not to be determined by them, but by the representatives of the people—they will get along well enough. Those roads which are economically and judiciously managed will make fair profits on the capital actually invested. That is all any road has a right to ask.

Battle Ships and Merchant Marine.

From the St. Louis Star.

The records of the new battleship Iowa and the American liners St. Louis and St. Paul show that American shipbuilders are the best in the world, and yet our merchant marine is too small to be recognized. Shall it continue so, is now the leading question.

Easter Cards, Booklets and Novelties—First Floor.

Friday's Our Remnant Day,
Our Special Bargain Day.

Remnants are the only goods we coax you to buy—they're a business loss that's counted on. The very low reduced prices we put on them to close them out quickly are not from imaginary values, but from prices that were current but a few hours or days before. Remnants of Dress Goods, Linens and other piece goods are carefully measured and marked just as they measure. Soiled or crumpled handkerchiefs, articles of under and outer wear, scratched and marred goods, etc., are ticketed and so arranged that you may see their exact condition. Thus it is with all remnants, and you buy them as they are and for what they are worth to you.

Tomorrow there'll be many bargain opportunities. Piles of remnants of every character and kind. Rare opportunities among the Dress Goods—choice pieces of the season's brightest stuffs, left by this week's steady stream of buyers—skirt lengths, dress lengths, waist lengths, children's frock lengths. And for quick distribution we've made the prices in many cases half and less.

Tomorrow we shall also offer various bargain lots of goods secured expressly for this occasion, at very specially low prices.

To the invalid Welsh's grape juice is necessary. It imparts a rosy glow of health to his pallid cheeks. It is a tonic liquid food rather than a stimulant, and "stays down" on a weak stomach when nothing else will. Your physician will tell you it is a better table beverage than tea or coffee. It is pure and unadulterated, and hence is most suitable for common service. Lowered prices just now.

You need run no chances. If you are after the genuine Vermont maple sugar and sirup—here it is. The second shipment is going rapidly.
